

ABSTRACT

The target has a descriptor writable by the controller to create in the descriptor in an object whose ID is managed by the controller. Thus the controller manages the object ID, issues an object operate command to the BBS of the target, writes information to an object created according to a create command, and then rewrites the object ID. Thereby, the list structure and data structure can be made definite, and it is possible to allow bulletin boards of more than one type or a plurality of bulletin boards of the same type to coexist successfully.